Dear Friends of Ukraine,

CONTACT CONGRESS NOW!

The White House several weeks ago announced a national security supplemental appropriations request to Congress in the amount of $106 billion. Of that amount, an additional $61.4 billion would be designated for Ukraine. An outline of the presidential request would include $30 billion in additional security and military assistance, $16.3 billion for State Department operations related to the war, $14.4 billion to support military intelligence efforts in Ukraine, with an additional $500 million to assist Ukrainian refugees currently in the United States.

Following the successful passage of a continuing resolution (CR) last week to avert a government shutdown, currently the president's supplemental request is being discussed by leadership in the U.S. Congress. It is yet unknown when the supplemental request will be voted upon in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives.

Since the President's appropriations request, there have been many opinions expressed about the supplemental and the current war of Russian aggression in Ukraine. The links below provide an assessment of continued assistance to Ukraine including an op-ed in The Washington Post by President Biden, as well as a report produced by the Chairs of the U.S. House of Representatives Committees on Foreign Affairs, Armed Services, and Intelligence:
